Isn't it amazing how much time we spend talking about food? "Have you ever eaten.....?" "What did you have for lunch?" and so on. And yet when you travel from one country to another, you find that people have quite different feelings about food. People often feel that what they eat is normal, and that what other people eat is strange or silly.

In most parts of Asia, for example, no meal is complete without rice. In England, people eat potatoes every day. In the Middle East, bread is the main part of every meal. Eating, like so many things we do, becomes a habit which is difficult to change. Americans like to drink a lot of orange juice and coffee. The English drink tea four or five times every day. Australians drink large amount of beer, and the French drink wine every day.

The sort of meat people like to eat also differs from one country to another. Horsemeat is thought to be delicious in France. In Hong Kong, some people enjoy eating snakes. Newzelanders eat sheep, but they never eat goat meat. The Japanese don't like eat sheep meat because of its smell, but they enjoy raw fish.

So it seems that although eating is a topic that we can talk about for hours, there is little common sense in what we say about it. People everywhere enjoy eating what they have always been eating, and there is very little we can do to change our eating habits.

Câu 76 : The writer thinks that.....

- A) people often change their feelings about food
- B) People eat only what is normal to everybody

- A) people almost always have rice in their meal
- B) rice is completely eaten
- C) rice is a perfect food
- D) rice is included in every menu

Câu 78 : People everywhere think that.....

- A) we can spend few hours talking about food
- B) there is very little common sense in what we say about the eating habits
- C) there is very little common sense in talking about food
- D) we should do much to change our eating habits.

Câu 79 : The Japanese enjoy eating raw fish because.....

- A) it doesn't smell
- B) it is special to them
- C) it is well boiled
- D) it is not good to have fish cooked

Câu 80 : The text is mainly about.....

- A) food and life
- B) people's attitude to food
- C) strange dishes in the world
- D) the importance of meat
